

تقويم برنامج التدريب التعاوني في الوحدات التدريبية للبنات بمنطقة عسير

Evaluating the Cooperative Training Program in the Training Units for Girls in Asir region

Abstract:

The study aimed to determine the impact of the cooperative training program on developing the life and job skills of the trainees, to measure the role of the cooperative training program in providing job opportunities for graduates, to measure the satisfaction of supervisors and trainees about the cooperative training program, and to identify the obstacles of the cooperative training program from the point of view of supervisors and trainees, to submit proposals to develop a program Cooperative training, the study used the descriptive and analytical approach, and a questionnaire for evaluating the cooperative training program from the point of view of the supervisors and a questionnaire for evaluating the cooperative training program from the trainees' point of view, the questionnaire was applied to a sample of supervisors and trainees amounting to (18) supervisors and (20) trainees. The study found that the cooperative training program in the training units for girls in Asir region contributes to the development of the life and job skills of the trainees, and the program contributes to creating job opportunities for the trainees from the point of view of the supervisors and trainees in the training units for girls in the Asir region, despite the lack of employment offers for the trainees during it. The program achieved the satisfaction of the trainees and the supervisors, and the results also discovered some obstacles for the female and male supervisors. In addition to that, a suggested proposal was submitted to develop the program.